JOHN G. WHITTIER.

A TRIBUTE FROM A MAINE ADMIRER OF THE QUAKER POET.

[For the Whig and Courier.

Enough and too much of dissect and the name,
What others our bliss, so much less our fame?
Indeed may we wrong, but the life may be true,
And heart-blest the same under fig-leaves or blue

So be man be a man, let him worship at will,
In Jerusalem's courts, upon Gerizim's hill
Who shun makes an idol of jewels, what cares the good Jew
For the Baptist of Wayne, the Quaker of Brown?

The recent frequent allusions in the papers to John G. Whittier, the Quaker Poet of America, the marked honor shown him in the observance of his seventieth anniversary of his birth, and especially the Dinner given him and the other contributors to the "Atlantic," a few weeks since, in Boston, call freshly to mind the man, the gifted poet, and the many sweet songs he has sung. And none of them perhaps, is more strikingly characteristic,—breathes a broader and more catholic spirit, than the one read at the Friends' School Anniversary, at Providence, R. I., in 1860, from which are quoted the above twin stanzas.

It surely is my well and truthfully he sang of him that whatever else he may need to make up a manly and Christian character, such as is possible to man in his sphere of imperfection here, he is not wanting in that charity, which is greatest of the Christian graces, and which "endureth long and is kind."

And it seems to abound in him, and go forth on its mission of mercy and love, just where it is most deficient in the Christian world—in the great diversity of religious opinions and creeds which has alienated and arrayed in bitter war, those who otherwise might have been true and perpetual friends. How full of meaning, and how clearly and forcibly expressive of this strong, over-mastering feeling of his heart, are the words

"The creed I care not, the world's but the livery of God,
And I care not if the samenesse of a coat is on the clod."

Those familiar with the Poems of Whittier know his earnest love of liberty and intense hatred of slavery, and that under the stimulus of these feelings, he early espoused the cause of the bondman, and sang and prayed for his deliverance and help.

Who can read and not be moved his "Farewell of a Virginia Slave Mother to her Daughters sold into Southern Bondage,"

"Gone, gone—sold and gone,
To the rice swamp dank and lone,
Far from home—O God in Heaven
Help the poor slave child forgiven—
Pity me, when the tortured one
Springs their back with many a groan,
Shield, a mother's kindness bless them,
Or a mother's anguish—succor them.

O, when weary, may they lay
Their head on the pillow of clay,
Freed from the lash—free from the pain,
Sleeping—when the fetter's gone
Spurn their back with many a groan,
Shield, a mother's kindness bless them,
Or a mother's anguish—succor them.

O, when weary, may they lay
Their head on the pillow of clay,
Freed from the lash—free from the pain,
Sleeping—when the fetter's gone
Spurn their back with many a groan,
Shield, a mother's kindness bless them,
Or a mother's anguish—succor them.

Gone, gone—sold and gone,
To the rice swamp dank and lone,
By the cotton fields beneath the moon
Mock the spirit—pleading for boon—
By the spirit-rent Hagar's anguish,—
O, many the hearts are broken
Of a mother torn from her children
Sold to the cruel stranger and unknown,
Still there hope and prayer are given,
With a more than mother's love
Gone, gone—sold and gone,
To the rice swamp dank and lone,
From Virginia's hills and waters,
Woe is me, my stolen daughter!"

The late war of the Rebellion which degenerated as we are sometimes told, into a war for the "Nigger," stirred to its very depths the warm and sympathic heart of Whittier, and furnished the occasion and inspiration for some of his sweetest poetical effusions; and among them may be noted as having marked beauty "Ein feste Burg ist unser Gott," (Luther's Hymn) "The Battle Autumn of 1862," "Astræa at the Capitol," "Port Royal," "Barbara Frietchie," and "They will be danc."

The last mentioned was written at the beginning of the terrible conflict, when anxiety was depicted upon every countenance, and faith and doubt, as to results, alternated in every heart. The first and last stanzas are so full of the spirit of resignation to the Divine will, and so touchingly expressive of trust in the infinite loving Father, that I yield to the temptation to quote them here.

"We see not, know not, all our way
Is night—with Thee alone is day
From out the torrent's trouble drift,
Above the storm our prayers we lift,
They will be done!

Strike, Thou the Master, we Thy keys,
The instrument of the destinies!
The minor of Thy lofty strain,
Our hearts shall breathe the old refrain,
Thy will be done!

Further on in the struggle, and when the "irrepressible conflict" had nearly culminated in the downfall of Slavery, he brings out his "At Port Royal" in which he makes the jubilant negro take a prominent part, and sing "with oar-strokes timing to their song:"

"The triumph note that Miriam sang,
The joy of unchained birds,
Hearing with Africa's mellow tongue
Their broken Saxon words.

O, praise an' tanks! De Lord has come
To set de people free;
An' massa tink it day ob doom,
An' we go jubilee.
De Lord dat heap de Red sea waves
He jus' as strong as den;
He say de word, we las' night slaves,
To-day, de Lord's freemen.

We know de promise nebber fail,
An' nebber lift de word;
So like de apostles in de jail,
We waited for de Lord:

And now he open wide de door
An' tow away de key;
We think we jes' like poor
We lub him better free.

De sun will grow, de cotton blow,
Hoe'll gib de rice an' corn,
O nebber you fear if nebber you hear
De dry ree blow his horn!"

It is almost painful to think that this gifted Poet, of whom New England and the whole country may well be proud, and whose voice and notes have ever rung for Humanity, Freedom, and God, has reached the age of seventy years, painful because there is associated with the thought, the fear that ere long he will sing his last song, and the harp whose music has ever been sweet and inspiring, too soon for earth will hang voiceless, because the hand of the Master will not be here to touch its strings.

Monson, Jan. 10th, 1878.

Is THERE DANGER?—You are thinking like silly idiots, when you say there is no danger in the cup. I know, from the blood of five generations of cider-drinking ancestors in my veins, the danger there is in this thing. There is not a speck of liquor that is not pleasant to me, that would not be a precious drop on my tongue. Look at me! Do I look like a man easy to be overcome by temptation? Do you know my life? Go back and learn it, and see what I have suffered, and yet I say to you, with this back-ground of evidence I declare to you, as I value my manhood, and my standing, and my soul, I would not dare to drink for three weeks a glass of liquor a day. That chasm yawns at your feet, many feet. Those who say there is no danger in that first glass of liquor, do not recognize the perils of hereditary weakness.—R. H. H. Murray.

THE REASON FOR IT.—Jennie Juno in one of her gossipy letters undertakes to explain why it is that so many young women marry elderly men. She looks away from money—which has been so generally brought into the calculation of such alliances—for the principal reason. The young man of to-day, according to this authority, is not the young man of fifty years ago; he is not thoughtful, sober, painstaking and conscientious; he lives at a club, has no love for home-life, nor desire to build up character and reputation as a man and citizen; his ideas of life are bounded by the theatre and the doings of his little set, and in too many cases his ambition is to own a racer, and be on intimate terms with the ballet. Naturally mothers shrink from intrusting their daughters to such youths as these, even if they have the opportunity, and are better pleased to bestow them on older men—men who know how little of real value there is in the temporary excitement of pleasure; who have, perhaps, been married once, and have learned to value home and the guarantees it affords for permanent happiness.

LAYING THE TABLE.—In the early days of Methodism in Illinois, a minister who had come west, and who still sported a high hat and broadcloth coat, was at a conference and said, "I am against every innovation of every shape, and therefore move the adoption of the following resolution: Resolved, That in the opinion of this conference it is just as sinful to steal government timber as any other kind of property." Whereupon a brother clergyman, called upon, rose up and responded: "I am evidently not the brother who introduced this resolution, but as a newcomer, and does not know the views and proceedings of this conference, I move that the resolution be laid on the table."

FIVE MONSTER LARGE WILD.—A Colorado Springs correspondent of the St. Louis Republican writes under date of 4th inst.

"A wonderful find has just come from the west, the wonderful discovery made by Prof. J. H. Kent, of Colorado College. He only in minutes that large bones, but in fact for bones of animals two or three feet in length, over a dozen of them have been found. The largest bone found is about eight feet long, the biggest bone he has found is over two feet long. Of course, the reptiles have been found. The largest bone found is about eight feet long, the biggest bone he has found is over two feet long

Where, within all the representative Democrat of to-day, be clothed that the leprous scabs left by treason shall no more betray him? As with his early, pro-slavery, whose pugnacious and slovenly brother, the brand of his crime is ineffaceably fixed, showing through every guise. Though wrapped never so well in the panoply of virtue or other hypocritical pretence, the plague spot may yet be visible, considered through the liability of the permanently paralyzed arm of the slave oligarchy. Our Democrat tapperers impelled against him will by the evil spirit of rebellion, to reveal the sister spirit, always ready to attempt to prove that there is none of the same. FORTIETH ANNIVERSARY.

[From the Vallejo (Cal.) Chronicle.]

To Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Egery, on their Fortieth Wedding Anniversary, Nov. 23d, 1877.

[The following lines were written on the occasion of the fortieth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Egery, of South Vallejo, by Mr. D. G. Barnes.]

Some forty years ago, or more,
Quite near old Lincoln's peaceless roar,
A maiden lived, we had most seen
Of sixteen years, or quite seventeen
Her hair and mien were bright and sweet,
A fairer form you never met—
The kind, in fact, which now and then
Makes havoc with the hearts of men.

A youth, also, to manhood grown,
Who scarce his few wild oats had sown,
Whose choice had fallen, or again,
In all the town of Bangor, Maine,
Said he, I think I've never seen
A sweeter girl, than Hannah Dean,
She is, in my thoughts each day, and hour,
I'll wait for her if she be my power.

Dear girl, he said, I cannot tell,
In words to you, the love I feel,
But if your answer should be, no,
I fear that I should suffer so,
My mind is weak, Job, when crossed o'er
With bulls, could scarce have suffered more,
I think if I should hear that word,
I'd wither down like Jonah's gourd.

'Twas the old, old story, ever new,
'Twas told for all both false and true,
And I write it old, 'twas right he should,
Where man to be alone is not good,
I think the life is any somewhere,
A life it was why God is who's pair,
And decreed them on this earth to live,
That they each other, help right give

Soon in that fine old eastern state,
They, all a law, as liege as fate,
That, if who there would married be,
Must state the fact in newspaper,
And after church three Sundays cast.
The good man who came there to preach,
Most from, see pulpit plainly state,
The [illegible] man we'd mate.

That while the [illegible] were married,
All relatives, too, were fain to slide,
To avoid the [illegible] strife,
That's evident at the publication of
Wedding preliminaries,
Of one, who solemnly swore, ale,
She swore not! Well, not in vain,
Her eyes said plainly, yes my choice

That, married, the wedding came,
The minister tolling each by name,
Said, Honey and Jerusalem,
Why God's together, should not live,
Must name it at this time, and place,
Or never after hold their peace,
Not answers came, for there were none,
To say to Jerusalem she'd rather [illegible]

Then, Arizona Job, days ye take Hannah,
To have and to hold in every manner,
To be your lawful wedded wife,
So help you God? Well, I'd like to
Before the answer came, she [illegible]
All thick as Tweed, [illegible]
And as with joy his heart [illegible]
He answered [illegible]

And then [illegible] Hannah Dean,
Wilt ye take unto [illegible]
Your lawful [illegible] husband,
As I live so I do, so Aaron is Job
Job is free and fair, full wife,
So long as God Allah gives [illegible]
Yes, I am [illegible] world [illegible]
Yes, then she slowly [illegible] her head

We come to [illegible] years, more,
We find them on this second score,
And though old Time [illegible] not stand,
They have [illegible] here, together in [illegible]
Among [illegible] man, one woman [illegible]
Gone [illegible] to their [illegible]
This forty years [illegible] filled
Since [illegible] married [illegible] wed

Yes, forty years, to-day, to-night,
Look back with them, as I [illegible]
The world [illegible] looked of that young pair,
With [illegible] hopes, and [illegible]
And [illegible] to me it seems,
The best and brightest of their dreams
Are realized, and [illegible] years,
For all the rest [illegible]

And now, my friends, [illegible]
I hope [illegible]
[illegible] any more to [illegible]
Their fortieth anniversary,
If we be [illegible], and, [illegible]
All blessings a good [illegible]
Remember, [illegible]
While justly treat their fellow men

ROVING FARMERS.—There is a class of farmers who are constantly on the lookout for a better place to go to. Their farms are always "for sale," and their dream of luxuriant lands in some other part of the country which side to be right, [illegible] a song," where they imagine they could be more prosperous and enjoy life better than where they now reside. Many of these men own mortgaged farms, and for such river to endure to remove where they can begin a free farm, though it be far, far away, is but natural manifestation to better or "a condition which the human mind cannot resist. But where can these men go, after selling their farms and be content? This is a serious question, which no man can answer of his own knowledge. Suppose that they can sell out and command $1,000 or $1,500 after paying all their debts, and they start for the West, Kansas, Missouri, Iowa, or some other state. Eighty acres of land, with a comfortable house or log cabin on it, can be bought for from $5 to $10 per acre. The land is all right, as good as lies out of doors," but, alas for the surroundings. Neighbors are scarce, society a myth, and the poor, tired housewife who follows her husband without a murmur pines for friends. The children have got to go two miles or further to school, and in the winter time they cannot attend much of the time on account of the storms. Churches are few and far between, and the people are generally a mixture of various sects, and the result of all is, many an honest farmer who goes West is unhappy and wishes himself back on his old homestead. So if one goes south, or anywhere, he will not find things just to his mind. If one thinks better than on the old place, another is worse, and taking all things into consideration, but few farmers change their places, who are able to make a living on the old place, even better themselves by removing to a distant state. One may own rich lands at a low price where there is no market for what he grows, and he may get into an unhealthy climate, and soon he may bury his wife and children, and what then? A gloomy world for him.—Colonial Farmer.

MOTHERS VS. DOCTORS.—Practical mothers learn much by their experience with the little babies entrusted to their care. Some of the most common sense facts in the physical culture of these little ones known to the more experienced mothers may not come across to those who have had little care of children. The foundation must be well laid to insure healthy and happy children. The child must be well kept, well fed, and well bathed. By a thorough understanding and practice of these four simple rules, much of the physical, mental, and moral suffering in life would be avoided by parent as well as child. If a healthy child—and a healthy one properly—by regularly put to bed about dark, in a quiet, well-ventilated, or even cold room, after supper, of plain food, it will naturally awake at day break. Nutritious food at regular hours, with no candy or stimulants, and free bathing, help the children to ward off many prevalent children's ailments, and to bear with much less danger the few that must necessarily come to the majority of little ones. The child that is just given a little confectionery, or any unsuitable food, and then rocked to sleep, should cause no surprise at waking up sick and feverish. It is simply the result of imaginary affection and want of knowledge on the part of the one in charge. It will certainly pay in the end to search diligently for the cause when a little child is preverbally cross.

SOCIAL MORALS.—The culmination of all recognized criminality in a woman is a breach of the marriage vow, but there are whole circles of well-bred society in which fidelity in this respect is scarcely even expected of the husband. In such circles the man who would be readiest to shoot the seducer of his wife will be heard at his club-house proclaiming that "married women are fair game," and that it is every husband's business to look out for himself. Make the sins of the women of fashionable life as great as you please, they only copy in a timid and faltering way the bolder vices of their husbands and brothers. At the worst, they end where their husbands began.—Col. Higginson.

A tramp was arrested, taken before a magistrate, and sentenced for three months. The justice, in explaining the sentence, remarked that while there was no evidence that the prisoner had been guilty of any crime, he thought it prudent to commit him, as he had the wild, haggard look of a man about to start a newspaper.

The manufacture of paper from wood has reached the altitude of perfection in Canada. The superintendent of a mill up there says a tree is cut down and shoved into one end of the mill, and five minutes later there is a neighbor at the other end to borrow the paper.—Danbury News.

It is this lying awake nights trying to determine whether to leave your fortune to an orphan asylum or a home for old men, that makes newspaper business so wearing.

IMPORTANT LETTER

From a Distinguished Physician.

NO tragic disease has entailed more suffering or baffled the skill of the physician than Catarrh. The sense of smell, of taste, of hearing, the human voice, the mind, sleep, more and sometimes life, are the victims of this malady. The poison it distributes throughout the system saps every vital force, and breaks down most robust constitutions. Ignored because hitherto considered by most physicians incurable, and by quacks and charlatans by those suffering from it, have little hope to be relieved of it this side of the grave. It is time, then, that a popular treatment of this terrible disease by remedies within the reach of all passed into hands of an eminent and trustworthy. The new and hitherto untried method adopted by Dr. Sanford in the preparation of his Radical Cure, and as we are hearty approvers of Science it is likely to succeed when all else has failed, from the fact, because it arises at the root of the disease, viz., the digestive tract, while it heals the ulceration, nourishes by direct application to the nasal passages. Its action is based on certain distinct rules, and in the vast majority of cases, effects a cure.

OSO. BEARD, M. D.

NORRIDGE BLOCK, SO. PARIS, MAINE, Oct. 1, 1877.

SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE

MAY safely claim to be one of a few remedies for which it is universally approved by medical men, and is in the practice in preference to any of the preparations usually prescribed by physicians.

"I can speak in the highest terms of your Radical Cure, which my obligations to you will always keep so. I cannot conscientiously recommend any preparation of the medical profession, believing it entirely superior to the use of myself, after a thorough trial of this last preparation, I have privately advised friends to use it, and in every case it has proved satisfactory."

UNIVERSAL SATISFACTION.

GENTLEMEN,—We have sold Sanford's Radical Cure for nearly one year, and have no hesitancy in saying we sold neither any other Catarrh Remedy that gives such universal satisfaction. We have to learn the first case of failure yet.

We are not in the habit of recommending patent medicines, but your preparation meets the wants of the public, and we feel it our duty to make this voluntary testimony. Should you desire it, you can use our name in any way you think best.

Very truly, [illegible]
